SMOKING

A bad habit is often harmful but not every bad habit is like smoking, which does injury to one's health. A smoker gets nothing but smoke for his money. In the long run he may get something worse — a dreadful disease called lung cancer. But habit, they say, is second nature; most smokers remain smokers for life. And even when they know that smoking can cause disease or even early death, they continue smoking. Can anything be more unreasonable than that ?
